

Introduction

Business agility requirements are driving more and more businesses to reinvent themselves. Changes are inevitable not just for profitability but also for an organization's very existence. Enterprises embark on ambitious business and technology initiatives and try to implement business solutions to meet the requirements. Too often these efforts fall woefully short of expectations, when the business models are translated into the final technology solutions. Business Executives and users clamor for better, faster and more effective consumer oriented solutions. The IT departments are under constant pressure due to ever changing technologies and continuously changing scope. This results in ineffective solutions!

History and Overview

Ultramatics was founded in January 2001 to provide innovative, powerful and strategic methodologies to enable organizations to deliver effective solutions faster. Ultramatics approaches the problem space in its entirety rather than warped from a one-dimensional perspective. By combining the business requirements with accurate technology mappings, Ultramatics reflects the business requirement in the solution. Ultramatics is privately held and is headquartered in Tampa, Florida and has offices in India.
